Common-Sense wins EDDY Best Product Award

There is a well known frustration in the Entertainment community. You're on site, 90% of the show is working and one solitary piece of equipment refuses to talk to the show control system!

Maybe the manual was wrong or that particular feature is vapour-ware! In either case an interface solution is needed.

Common-Sense is the ultimate solution! It provides a protocol interface that supports contact closures, switch matrices, analogue control voltage, real time clock, MIDI, MIDI show control, Infrared, RS232, RS485 and of course DMX512.

All of these interfaces are software controlled in a self-contained wall mount enclosure. The product is configured using a user-friendly graphic software package, Sense-Edit.

Common-Sense received a Best New Product EDDY Award at the recent New York presentation by Entertainment Design Magazine.
